Practice Manager

PFM Group Consulting LLC

Sean McNeeley is the practice manager for PFM's Center for Retirement Finance, which offers a full menu of services to clients nationally to address pension and other post-employment benefit (OPEB) financial issues. He has assisted state and local governments with retirement benefit strategy, redesign, and financial analysis and planning projects, policy development, and defined contribution plan investment consulting.

Previously, Sean was chief financial officer at the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission for more than seven years, where he was responsible for overseeing its financial operations, treasury, and debt management. During his tenure, the Commission significantly increased its net revenue and reserves while reducing outstanding debt, achieving bond rating upgrades, implementing a new Enterprise Resource Management financial system, instituting new investment policies and procedures, and establishing a trust fund for OPEB that funded the majority of the liability. His prior experience includes serving as the director of policy in the City of Philadelphia Mayor's Office, and also serving as the City's senior assistant budget director. He also analyzed pension funding requirements and incorporated them into long-term financial planning. Additionally, Sean served as a senior consultant for Deloitte & Touche LLP.
